Dissatisfaction with Congress-The Reform Que tion-Effect of the European War-The Claims of the Argentine Ropublic Rejected-Abolition of the National Guard.

VALPABAISO, Sept. 3, 1870. According to the constitutional stipulations the sessions of Congress terminated on inst., but an extraordinary session of fifty days was immediately convoked by President. Unfortunately, the time these law-givers has so far been occupied by questions of secondary importance, and there seems a be a disinclination on their part to meet the subjects that claim popular attention and sympathy.

The absorbing question of the hour is the Reform bill have taken place, arguments and eloquence in a mild degree have been expended on the subject, but no te has been recorded. It is now proposed that Congress shall continue its sessions until the bill is nally disposed of, and it is possible, in view of the outside pressure brought to bear, that the proposition will be sustained. Otherwise the project of reform could hardly be settled during the present extraordinary session. The peo le generally have reason to be dissatisfied with the action of the Senators and Deputies. Schoolboy speeches and ferce invective are productive of but little benepresent extraordinary session. The peo le generally have reason to be dissatisfied with the action of the Senators and Deputies. Schoolboy speeches and deree invective are productive of but little benefit, and, on the contrary, are reprehensible when the grave interests of the country demand a hearing. A smotion was introduced, but not definitely acted upon, regarding the lands in possession of the Araucanian Indians. Forgetting the important fact that as yet this territory has not entirely failen into the power of the government, and that the troops employed in the campaign have found the enemy rather too fornidable, an enterprising representative desired to declare the territory public property, and to portion it out among the settlers who might be induced to migrate thinter. It is not to be supposed that the tide of immigration would flow freely in that direction, since the cheerful character of the Indians and their propensities towards appropriating horsefiesh, &c., belonging to other parties are very generally known.

The news of the war between Prance and Prussia, received here by the last steamer from Panama, caused great excit-ment and some depression, in business circles especially. The amount of mercantile transactions done here by French and German houses is very great, the latter probably being in the ascendant. The difficulties entailed upon the exchange and purchase of merchandise are therefore considerable, and even aiready have begun to be felt. The markets are extremely dult; holders of dry goods in large quantities appear anxious to realize, but no purchases of merchandise are therefore considerable, and even aiready have begun to be felt. The markets are extremely dult; holders of dry goods in large quantities appear anxions to realize, but no purchases of merchanes for therefore to the claimants.

The Treatont on the 23d utimo, received the Argentine and British Ministers to give his decision of the prosidit of ministers and privile and privile and privile and privile and privile and privil left this port under orders for home. The Austrian fritzate Donau also sailed upon the same day. These vessels were receited by their respective governments in view of the present European war.
